1. M. Bonet did not want the Nazis to take Dad's body, so he buried him in a quiet spot in his orchard, told the authorities that all aboard had been killed and handed over Dad's identity tags.
2. Olive's Dad had shown M Bonet a photograph of his family. A few months later, when he heard rumours of an English woman helping Jews escape, he tracked her down to take a message back to England and then recognised Sukie as one of the children in the photo.
3. Olive's Dad's experience is similar to that of the German airman who crashed in Budmouth Point. However, her Dad was treated kindly by M. Bonet. In the text it says that "M Bonet had gone running down the orchard to help him, not arrest him." Whereas, many of the Budmouth villagers were unkind to the German pilot.
4. Because she had mistaken Sukie for her mother during the bombing raid and when she saw how much younger Sukie was than her mother, she was embarrassed at her silly mistake.
5. The family can look forward to visiting Dad's grave in M. Bonet's orchard. Sukie explains that, M. Bonet says "we're welcome to visit Dad's grave when it's safe to do so," and Mum replied "I'd like that, darling. I think we all would."

7. Queenie's plan to bring in another refugee boat from France made Olive feel optimistic for the future. It says in the text that Olive felt that "it really did help, feeling part of those plans. It reminded me that there was a future and we'd all be involved in it. We weren't going to be beaten by hate."
8. The milk was beginning to go off due to the heat on the long journey, getting thicker and smellier like cheese. It says in the text that, "It was a warm day and the journey took forever." "All the while, the goats milk got lumpier and smellier."
9. "They had hung scarves at the windows and spread bright blankets on their beds in an attempt to make things more homely. Mr Schoenmann had set up a bread oven to bake special loaves for the Sabbath. Fraulein Weber was teaching Hebrew, the newspaper writers running a newsletter of sorts." The Schoenmann sisters had also "made the most amazing treehouse."
10. Olive loves Budmouth and feels safe there. I believe this because in the text, it says that, "I felt as if I had found safety" and "I felt a pang of love for this funny little village by the sea that I now called home."
11. Because she "could hear the real sea sighing and swooshing over the rocks below."
